

Photosynthesis: study notes

Photosynthesis converts light energy into chemical energy stored in glucose. Plants use carbon dioxide and water in this process. Chlorophyll absorbs light in chloroplasts. Glucose stores chemical energy that cells can use later. Oxygen is released as a byproduct. The light-dependent reactions capture energy, while the Calvin cycle uses that energy to build sugars.